FRENCH THEATER .- A bright little vaudeville of the Palsis Royal class, entitled "Le Misanthrope et "Auvergnat," was on Saturday evening produced at this theater. The story is of a wealthy rentier, Mr. Chiffoner, who, surrounded by sycophants, yearns for He finds one in an Auvergnat water carrier, and, in an outburst of delight, binds him to an association for a number of years, at the same time subjecting himself to a heavy penalty in case the compact should be broken. Naturally enough, the unvarnished truth presently beomes more distasteful than the flattery which formerly encompassed him. The Auvergnat refuses to dissolve the agreement, and persists in the development of traits of honesty so marveleous and mal apropos as to throw the whole household into confusion. As a last resort, a bright servant maid is set upon him. She undermines his integrity by the simple process of winning his affections, and lures him not only into prevarication, but through successive stages of error, ultimately to matrimony. Facilis descensus. Thus tranquillity is restored to the distressed Chiffonet. The piece was excellently acted by Mr. Chol, who represented the misanthrope, Mr. Juignet, who is always clever in dialect characters like that of the Auvergnat; and Miss Aline Delange,

Niblo's Saloon do not appear to so good advantage as Miss Karsch is piquant, gentle and persuasive as the "little treasure," but she throws an expression of alto gether too much maturity into the character. Not only in her manner, but even in her costume, she far exceeds the supposed age of Cécile. Her last dress was most in harmony with the role. Madame Larmet did the most that was possible with the part of Henriette, and the gentlemen engaged in the representation sustained their espective characters with good effect. The most suc cessful performance—although a little strongly colored -was that of Madame Bergson, as Madams de Bar-

Poirier"-known to New-York audiences by the English version performed at Waliack's Theater under the title Noble Son-in-Law"-will be repeated. On Monday, Dec. 26, a Christmas entertainment will be given, to which the attention of heads of families, es pecially young families, is invited by the director.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.-The advantages of no doubt, to all parties concerned. She is made by innuendo. Nevertheless, I will not was heartily welcomed and liberally applanded whenever the opportunity presented itself. With an infe that I paid to Mr. Opdyke or to any one heity and want of taste that would be singular in any 110,000, or any sum, as purchase money for the office of other audience except that which we are accustomed surveyor of the Port of New-York. Give us the name to find at the Academy, the particular period chosen for bestowing the special compliment of an encore was not one when the young lady had distinguished herself by sed as a witnessed in the case of Opdyke singing, or acting, or in any artistic way, but immedistely after her drum accompaniment of the Rataplan chorus. The lintention was good, however; and it is only fair to remember that our operatic public would probably not be stupid if it could help it. When Miss Kellogg reappears as Margaret, in which character she has no occasion to play the drum—we presume that some more appropriate moment for testifying respect and good feeling will be discovered. One point is well settled, however. She is free from future affront in the manner which last week aroused so much sympathy on her behalf

WALLACK'S THEATER .- Mr. Dion Boucicault's inew comedy "How She Loves Him," will this evening be represented at Wallach's Theater, for the first time in America. The principal characters will be sus-tained by Miss Gannon, Miss Henriques, Miss Morant, Messra, John Gilbert, Fisher, Lester Wallack, Floyd

OLYMPIC THEATER .- "The Streets of New-York" will this evening be presented for the first time at this theater. The play is a revival of Mr. Boucicault's "Poor of New-York," which was originally produced with remarkable success in 1837, at Wallack's Theater. It is strongly cast at the Olympic, and, has been prepared with great attention to scenio effect.

VAN AMBURGH'S MENAGERIE.-There will be to-day a new addition to the manifold attractions of this place of entertainment. "Signor Victor," whose name has floated mysteriously on posters and in paragraphs for the last few days before the wondering eyes of the public, and who now turns out to be the most astonishingly-trained monkey of modern days, will be included in the regular exhibitions. The collections of wild beasts and rare birds are in view at all hours.

THE HIPPOTHEATEON. - Madame Louise Tournaire, the elegant rider, and M. Verreke, the celebrated trapese performer, are this week joined to the company at this cetablishment. Marietta Zanfretta, the fun bulist, and the two young Stickneys continue their performances as heretofore. The present programme will be repeated only during this week, as a new Christmes pautomine is to be introduced on Monday next.

BARNUM'S MUSEUM .- The dramatio perform ances for the week at Baraum's Museum will be "Debo rah; or the Jewish Malden's Wrongs," every after neon; and "Martin the Privatest" every evening. In the morning, at 11 o'clock, the Indian tribe will ex-Too upon the sings.
